WHO STOLE DURKEE'S PIG?

Alderman Giles B. Durkee is at present mourning the loss of his pig which is supposed to have been stolen from his pen, and he is at loss as to its whereabouts. Mr. Durkee has nine young pigs on his premises on North Main St. and last Saturday morning when he went to feed them one was missing.

Heat once notified the police and a thorough search began for the missing quadruped. He started early the other morning and all the pig pens of North Barre were visited with a view of finding it. When asked about the color of the pig he could not tell.

Giles says it is a mystery to him how a person got into his pen without being detected. He has a battleship in his front yard, well armed to guard his premises, but the thieves got by the blockade. Giles has come to the conclusion that his pigs are not the kind that squeal or they would have given the thieves away. He is thinking strongly of putting a private detective on the case.

RAILROADING AS A BUSINESS.

Hustle Once, Last and All the Time, Says Chauncey Depey.

The railway profession presents more attractions for a young man than any other line of business, says Chauncey M. Depey in "Railroad Men." It has greater opportunities for advancement, and its employment is more permanent. To succeed in it in any department requires health, brains, honesty and equipment. The young man must make up his mind that if he would rise in the profession he must never question the kind of work that is put upon him, the hours which are required of him or the places, agreeable or disagreeable, to which he is assigned.

Railway organization is essentially military, because upon the ability, vitality and integrity of the vast number of men in the various positions working harmoniously together depend most of the internal commerce of the country, the prosperity of business, the activities of communities, great and small, the funds of investors and the safety of hundreds of millions of passengers.

The young man who proposes to enter railway service should first decide whether he will take his chances for a career in outdoor or indoor work. If outdoor work, which is in the operating department, he will be immensely assisted if he has had the opportunities which are offered in the technical schools. In these days of thorough training it is almost impossible for a young man of ordinary education to get on in competition with the graduates of the Sheffield Scientific school at Yale, the scientific schools of Columbia, the special education of Cornell, the big advanced eastern colleges, and the instruction given in many other of the schools and colleges of the United States.

If he selects indoor work, he must make up his mind that much more will be required of him at first than in commercial lines. If he is in the treasurer's department and shows special efficiency and intelligence, when a vacancy occurs in the freight department, in any discussion that should happen between the heads of these departments, he is almost certain to be drafted for a better position by the traffic manager, and vice versa.

Railroading differs from no other business or profession in its beginnings. The salary is small. The work is hard. It is only the few who by cheerful readiness at all times to perform their own tasks and to stay several hours—and if necessary all night—to meet the requirements of the office or to do the work of the line, lazy and incompetent attract the attention of their superiors and are marked for promotion.

In the service every one's eye is on every one else. There is a generous appreciation of comradeship, at the same time there is severe criticism of the conduct and character of fellow employees and officers. The moment an officer becomes careless of his duties, inattentive and out of reach when wanted, his chances for promotion are over, and the accident of a discharge or displacement is imminent.

There is but one rule of success in railway service, and that is, no matter how high you get, once you are always a hustler and a hustler until you die or resign.
